A: If you had a backup made the day before the crash, than you may want to use software that can undelete the files. If you have a copy from a week earlier, then you may need to see if you can get a copy of the customer's data from a different service to get the lost files back. In either case, it may be worth your time to check out an undelete utility. If the files are trivial, use undelete your backup and move on. If they are truly lost, it may be worth all the time and effort to get them back. In either case, read the manuals and make sure you understand what you are doing. I would suggest that you use the undelete utility from a copy made before you deleted the files that you want back. Q: Chunk 8 lines to a sentence I have a task that has been running for a while now and I am stuck. What I want to do is have a program that takes a set of 8 lines of text and convert the text in to one single sentence. Example: Machine A delivers oil from reservoir 1, while machine B delivers oil from reservoir 2. I want it to create one single sentence, (for example, "Machine A delivers oil from reservoir 1, while machine B delivers oil from reservoir 2.") Theres probably a way to solve it all in memory, but Im not sure how. A: the simplest solution is to use stringbuilder. class Program { static void Main(string[] args) { var lines = new StringBuilder(); lines.AppendLine("Machine A delivers oil from reservoir 1, while machine B delivers oil from reservoir 2."); lines.AppendLine("This sentence contains two lines of text and a line break."); lines.AppendLine("The word 'hello' is a part of this sentence."); lines.AppendLine("The word 'hello' can be found in three different sentences."); lines.AppendLine("The second of these sentences has the word 'world'."); lines.AppendLine 3da54e8ca3
